Nautical Trivia

by Ginny Hauff

1. Did you know that Hurricane Bob (1979) was the first male name used in the naming of hurricanes?
2. Did you know that Tango is the pronunciation of the letter T on a VHF radio and that the letter W is pronounced Whiskey?
3. Did you know that the structure built across the mouth of a harbor designed to break waves, protecting boats at anchor, is a breakwater?
4. Did you know that a small storage space usually in the aft of the boat is referred to as a lazarette?
5. Did you know that a heading of 90 degrees is the east cardinal point of the compass and the heading of 180 degrees is south?
6. Did you know that the United States recognizes territorial limits of three miles offshore?
7. Did you know that when exiting from a lock, for more control and easy departure, slipped bow and stern lines should be utilized and these lines should always be tended, not cleated (especially on the way down)?
8. Did you know that when a water-skier says he/she is skiing "22 off," the ski rope is 53 feet long?
